

Our office is closed, but we can still help

The Alzheimer's Association is following guidance from local public health agencies related to the COVID-19 (coronavirus) so, as a precaution, our staff and volunteers are working remotely. Despite this change, we want to reassure you that we are still working to support you and your loved ones.

Aside from in-person meetings, virtually all Alzheimer's Association programs and services are available to all Colorado families. Meetings, events and participation, both in internal and external activities, will be conducted online or by phone whenever possible. Please check alz.org/co for details on meetings and events.

Following are some links to programs and services – all offered at no charge – that you may find valuable.

The Alzheimer's Association will continually reevaluate these measures and resume in-person engagements as soon as we are able, based on public health guidelines. Until that time, please utilize our resources and know that the Alzheimer's Association is available to you 24/7 for around-the-clock care and support.
